Wes's Words of Wisdom

Who would like to gain more distance off the tee? I think I speak for most when I say that more distance is gladly welcomed. The good news for golfers is that you don't have to increase your clubhead speed to gain more distance. Thanks to modern technology, we know that the closer you can get your dynamic loft and angle of attack at impact, the further you'll hit the ball. The angle created is called spin loft. This may sound complicated, but simply increasing your angle of attack and having the right driver loft can give you more distance. Before you go buy a new driver, come see me and we will get your numbers on the GC Quad to assist in gaining more distance off the tee.

April 16th we aerated the greens. Pictured below is the Toro ProCore 648 at work. This machine is crucial in getting air flow to the roots, helping the greens breathe and creating a healthy, more enjoyable playing surface.
