With football season in “full swing”, I figured it would be a great time to incorporate football into striking a golf ball. If you’ve watched the opening kickoff of a game or a field goal kicker attempting a field goal, you will notice a couple things.

- *The kicker stands to the left side of the ball (assuming he’s right footed)
- *As he steps forward to kick the ball he approaches from the inside of the ball
- *The kicker contacts the inside portion of the ball with his foot and his leg swings further out to the right

This action produces a football that will move in the air from right to left. So how will this help you when hitting a golf ball? It’s the same concept! When setting up to hit the golf ball, the golfer (assuming he’s right handed) sets up to the left side of the ball. As he/she comes down to strike the golf ball, your club head should strike the inside portion of the golf ball and your club path will be further out to the right. For those of you that pull or pull-cut the golf ball, picture a kicker kicking the inside portion of the football and your primary miss will be a thing of the past.

Fall is finally here, even though the weather does not know it yet. We will be aerifying on Monday, October 3rd and Tuesday, October 4th. With these warm temperatures, the greens should heal up in a respectable amount of time. Aerifying is a necessary practice that we must do to keep the greens as healthy as possible for those long stressful summer months. It also helps the greens stay healthy and withstand the long winters we sometimes have in this region. I hope everyone is going to enjoy the nice October that we are in store for.
